Abstract

A method for serving requests includes receiving a user request for an Internet information file, making a query for the file if it has not been cached by the local server and making a file request, the file request being directed to a feeder if a reply indicates that a central file server has the file. An arrangement includes at least one local cache server, at least one central file server and a Feeder for receiving a request for an Internet information file from a local cache server, deriving a query from an alphanumerical string received from the local cache server; and querying the central file server. A caching system includes a set of local cache servers, at least one central file server, and a Feeder for communicating with at least one local cache server and retrieving information files from the central file server using data base queries.
